of veteran trial attorneys who are dedicated to leaving a legacy of significant advancement in Women's Rights to the next generation of working women. He is a long-standing member of the National Employment Lawyers Association of New York, the New York Women's Bar Association, and the New York Trial Lawyers Institute.

Invited Speakers

LIZ ABZUG, a consultant, lawyer, lobbyist and candidate for New York City elective office, has long been involved in women's civil and human rights. She is an adjunct professor in Urban Studies at Barnard College and Columbia University. In 2003, Liz and her sister honored their mother by establishing the Bella Abzug Leadership Institute, a 501(c)3 organization to mentor and train high school and college women to be proactive, principle driven and visionary leaders of tomorrow in both political and civic life.

CONGRESSWOMAN CAROLYN B. MALONEY, a Democrat who has represented the 14th district in New York City since 1992, is a nationally recognized advocate for women's issues. Rep. Maloney has worked to increase public awareness of social inequalities between men and women that still exist in America. In January, 2002 she released the Dingell-Maloney Report : A New Look Through the Glass Ceiling, documenting a widening wage gap between men and women managers. This was followed up in 2004 with a second study that showed a persistent wage gap for all women of 20-cents on the dollar.

SONIA OSSORIO, who was elected President of NOW-NYC in January, has served on its Board of Directors in various positions since she joined in 1999. She created its very successful Media Watch Committee and then was its spokesperson when she became Vice President of Public Information. She came to New York in 1993 as a business writer for Gannett Newspapers. In 2000 she became head of the public relations department of Catalyst, a nonprofit research organization that works to advance women in business. Ms. Ossorio delivered the keynote address at the 2000 Conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Hispanic Women.

JACK TUCKNER is the founding partner of Tuckner, Sipser, Weinstock & Sipser LLP, a law firm that specializes in women's rights in the workplace. Formerly a Legal Aid Criminal Defense Division trial lawyer, he leads a team
